

Have you ever dreamt in blue? When was the last time you felt it? Not the last time you felt the feeling but also not not the last time you felt blue? Where do you go if you disappear? What is the difference between foreground and background? Between the subject and the speaker? From the voice, from the voice from the body from the speaker to the echo?

boy blue

Bibliography

- Blue Boy, Volume XII, 1977
 Gainsborough, Thomas, The Blue Boy, 1770
 Genius, Perfume, Set My Heart on Fire Immediately, 2020
 Gonzalez-Torres, Felix, Untitled, 1989
 Jarman, Derek, Blue, 1993
 Jones, Amelia, Body Art: Performing the Subject, 1998
 Morrison, Toni, The Bluest Eye, 1970
 —, The Site of Memory, 1995
 Mitchell, Joni, Blue, 1971
 Nelson, Maggie, Bluets, 2009
 Solnit, Rebecca, A Field Guide to Getting Lost, 2005
 Vigil, Andrea, Lapis Ring, 1997

Prologue

If I could tell you where we go this wouldn't be a very good story. Because, my answer is as bleak as it is boring. The simplicity of the question provokes the complexity of its solution. Simply, I don't know. So instead I'll offer this. What this is may only be a long winded question, leaving me breathless and bereft everytime I ponder it.

Where do "you" go when "you" disappears? and what gets left behind?

Follow instructions to construct BOYBLUE zine.

Ultramarine blue paper is recommended to print upon, but white 8 1/2X 11 is sufficient.
If you would like a copy with a wish from the artist, email Knorri1@artic.edu with your:

Name

Mailing Adress

I Love you

I Miss you

Thank You,

Kevin W. Norris

